"about this yearbook thing. . . is it too late to submit?"

well, once again the risd yearbook has been produced, after some (maybe much) speculation. it wouldn't have been possible without your submissions. thank you to those who made it, and sorry about the ones that didn't.

dawn, and i am again reminded of the purity of nature against the more comical nature of my race. a sky that mocks silver and opal presiding over a series of constructions created by an animal befuddled with emotion, writhing in the self-imposed agonies that such a limited lifespan and range of vision might give birth to. the same race that refuses to feel humility over its situation then yearns for the greatness that it only dimly perceives. i ignore these grandiose schemes, aware that the only real greatness i can achieve is the completion of a few self-alotted tasks: my independence from my roots, the continuation of my artistic delving, and the continuation of my line. i can't say how much these things separate me from my piers, as they are facets of what i believe most people feel, but with that same lack of humility i consider them my own, and in a small part of me, i can understand the dawn.

the other day i was waiting for a friend on the corner, when on the other side of traffic, on the sidewalk,
stood my mother; erect and endlessly waving,
her arm detached at the elbow, waving, waving.

twisted and lame her grin grew wider after each passing car, that denture-wrenched smile-stretching beyond the width of her dress, knocking down passbyers and pushing aside baby carriages.

i dodged potholes and bicycles and reached out to my mother, but she simply stood there and waived. didn't she remember her baby child, her tomboy daughter standing in front of her now in a dress just like mother would have bought?

my words drifted lazily into the air pushed aside by the motion of that hand, back and forth, back and forth, gobbled up by that grin, tasteless and bland, now as wide as the neighborhood block, diminished by her stare, glassy as the clock which glides through our kitchen tick tock tick tock mimicking the motion of her hand.

so i ran to the other side where i watched her through the traffic of other strangers and daughters, sons and fathers who knew each other better once before. and picking up my own hand with the other i waved back and now both of us stood there waving looking much like one another, mother and daughter, our hands continuously flailing.

water

i'm animated, powerful and essential.
i'm as slow as a glacier and as fast as the johnstown flood.
i'm solid liquid and gas all within 101 degrees.
i cover three quarters of the blue planet.
i'm the main ingredient of all life.
i'm what drives up the price of waterfront property.

i'm in coca-cola and the blood of christ.

i dissolve mountains and shipped them to the sea with the icy heel of my hand i smooth hills and fill valleys.
i covered atlantis and got noah off his ass.
i'm part of everything you eat.
just add water, makes it's own sauce.

i've been employed and abused since man hit town.
i get dammed up and poured over a wheel to make electricity.
i'm the fireman's friend.
i absorb radiation and cool reactors.
i distribute heat in a home.
i get flushed down your toilet.

on my back, i carried slavery and small pox to the new world.
i took tobacco and artillery shells to the old world.
i brought your toyota to you.

i'm the iceberg that slashed a hole in the titanic, and the band played on as she slipped beneath my surface.

i carry dissolved poison.
i get covered with oil on a regular basis.

i'm the sweat of your brow.
i'm the dew on your windshield.
i'm a wave crashing on the beach.
i'm a cold beer on a hot day.
i'm the drip from a faucet that keeps you up all night.
i'm the smell of a lake.
i'm a tear in your mother's eye.
i'm the fog on the meadow.
i'm in a dry martini.
i'm 92% of your body.

i carry the virus and i cleanse the wound.

i'm tireless, energetic and patient.

icebox

(want may be sordid, but love is always purple)

m. simpson

Beneath all the thick honey rain I watched her crush his screaming shadow. Delirious and drunk the chainless iron sky drooled waxy dreams of shining delicate breasts. Who would ask the soaring forest goddess to whisper from my luscious garden:

"You must worship me into your bed, a thousand languid moons away?"

She manipulated the sweaty blue lather so to fiddle her beauty, sparkling like a diamond in winter. These elaborate visions that shot through my head had no place to land. Not equipped with the frantic pink gown his mother used to wear he was unable to have a tiny death, to incubate, to bleed, to smear, to blow, shake or kill. Nothing to do but wait for the boy reading his Winds & Petals poetry to yank from his sleeve an odd fruit. A musically inclined peach with the water size of a million sea ships.

If I have to sit, I'd rather hit. Rip, run, lick, pound, leave, eat, pant, moan. But I never, ever want a fast and together suit it doesn't let me hold your lovely skin.

Trudge through the summer of your TV, legs aching, eyes burning, a gorgeous man in the mist. I recall asking him if he would stop to beat me and rob my car. That moment is now buried under that hot red and white road. They told me you can use your tongue to chant after the power rocks out. It is true that your own reality is the absolute top after all is done and the sun gets shot.

Don't give up!
Pray. It works!
The family that prays together stays together

sept. 15, 1994 12.56 am i am beginning to see things in the past. i knew that i would see them there when they were now.

oct. 21 1994

when they're lined up –head down– practicing the motion, almost touching the cueball. sometimes they close an eye to watch the stick fall into focus at the blue end. when they finally come around it will be an ugly jab, a punch. and the ball will be pushed into a collision instead of a stroke that results in a precise strike. and you stand there and you watch them take four more practice jabs and then they need and wait.
that waiting is necessity condensed.
an old sidewalk that has a dip in it that collects water when it rains is being replaced out of necessity. but i is not the necessity felt in wait
— it is need i don't care for.

it works

When I left this evening, an alarm was going off and I could hear it out my window.

Whoo-whoo.

Whoo-whoo.

And now that I'm back from leaving I find it not at all surprising that it still says Whoo-whoo, whoo-whoo.

The air smelled tonight like ice cubes. My jacket worked enough, though a bit cold. I gave a slight hustle to my walk and every now and then I'd pull the whole thing up and out a bit by the collar, then hustle in stride some more.

Whoo-whoo.

At my friends house I met a friend of his, tall and lanky with a space between his teeth. He was excitable and had big hands he fought with. So the three of us climbed into a car and went to this bar where everyone goes. Everyone. And everyone was there except the everyone I wanted to be with and that's when the faces contorted so I reverted to the popcorn area — away. But the salt killed it and after a while even the popcorn corner wasn't far enough. It had a good view, though. There were men and women everywhere. There was music that went boom-boom just like the whoo-whoo, except in the bar where everyone goes, the music owned all conversation. So everyone yelled and it came out backward or like whispers. One of the guys I could see was a real tufguy. He was big and crushed beer cups which were paper on his friends hat and yelled. He'd yell whoooo, just once, or one at a time. He'd associate that way.

Songs came on that mean something to me. The big guy sang these songs, loudly, to girls, but I couldn't hear him unless he went whoo.

Then I found myself outside again where the air smelled like ice cubes — so I started to walk, finding I wanted to hustle. I came across a pile of newspapers, so I took one. I thought I was getting a deal.

Across the street a big fat girl with a pear shaped body was drunkardly bounding homeward. Looking at her I noticed that her wrists had gone limp and her feet crossed. Her Chic jeans chafed when her knees hit and quickly, no-one was around.

Then she fell. One cross trainer hit the other the wrong way and she fell. It was the kind of fall you walk by... I hustled by, pulling the whole thing up and out a bit by the collar.

The fat girl didn't take it that way. On her way down, she made a half-assed attempt to put out her hands, but even that motory reaction was drunk, and the limp wrist folded beneath her weight. The pear rolled down and over, lazily, uneventfully. All eventfullness was in the initial stumble. But she stayed there.

In front of her about a block were happy people in cóllege and because Margo slept with Johnathin, they didn't react. Behind her were lights and stores with no one.

I stutter stepped and opened my mouth to say, well, something. But I said nothing. The college people were closer now, but then Margo slept with Mary and everything else went away.

The fat girl saw them, levitated begrudgingly to her feet and pigeon-toed herself away through and empty parking lot, limper wrist in hand — and I stood there.

With the two bucks I had I decided on some sort of food supplement. I passed a convenience store, considered my options and looked at the paper. Mondays. It was Thursday. Fuck.

I went back to the convenience store, bought some milk and ice cream to compliment the ice cube air and exited. Whoo-whoo.

Further up the street I was accosted by a small group of young eccentrics. Once it was confirmed that I atttended the same learning institution as they, the gay chinese boy told me that was good, because I looked like one of them, and that the other college students sucks. He said sucks. That's double plural.

His grammatical problems were of no concern to me, so I hustled along and behind me he sang something like "If you're gay and you know it, clap your hands..." He clap-clapped and I walk-walked.

I saw my coner and headed that way, diagonally across the street.

Whoo-whoo.

Behind me was a cop who slowed and looked and good songs that big guys sing ran through my head but my keys were in my hand. I got to my door and at the bottom of it was a pen and you know what?

It works.

these walls knew everything of our intentions. us kids knew nothing of our actions. every saturday we would scavenge the grounds of curiosity as we knew it in the town of rockville. leaning up against the cornerstore wall. we watched a curtain of flames lick our town to the ground in a brilliance of orange and red. that was the day the town was on fire. from the fields' edge, we heard the screams from the firehouse, as the train rattled by the window grease of the doughnut shop. earlier that morning, while picking the gutter of matches, rags and bottlecaps, i saw maria's dog pass by the liquor store. we followed the filthy hump of its' back rise and fall in slow, heaving waves, among the brittle sheets of wheatgrass in parker's field. and then, i watched it scumble beneath the tractor., whining in the dirt. heeding the call, i threw the rag to the ditch and shook in the dusty shadows of my friends just ahead... lightly running. and we stood there, three backs to the walls, sucking in the smolder-satifaction, watching the blackened heat of a thousand bedspreads and spring jackets take their place in front of a blazing sun in a brilliance of orange and red.

marshmallow shoes

I saw this man gliding down the street, "MARSHMALLOW SHOES" I screamed! He whispered that not only were they marshmallow shoes but they were 100% organic. I told him to go get loopy so the walking man walked and laughed his way down the street in his marshmallow shoes. I kept on rolling towards my destination, which was unknown and I had a déjà vu of my grandmother making me sit on her marshmallow shoes. She told me it would help my posture but I just sank into the marshmallow shoes.

That passed and I went into a diner for a small cup of coffee to keep me moving, there was new management, and all they had on the menu was marshmallow shoes. I thought it was a bit odd but I ordered a small side of marshmallow shoes smothered with gravy. My waitress Fern said they had no gravy but only Kraft fluff to go on my marshmallow shoes, so so I said O.K., bring it on.

I have passed on the name of this diner to anyone cultured enough to appreciate a good slice of marshmallow shoes. Unfortunately it got so overcrowded and famous that they moved the whole bubble gun factory to L.A. and called it MARSHMALLOW SHOES WITH A SIDE OF FLUFF. Of course I got no credit for the name, no free tickets, no free parking, no marshmallow shoes, nothing. It has been discovered recently that over exposure to any substance containing marshmallow shoes can lead to baldness, deterioration of vocal chords and /or disintegration of bone structure.

Good thing my doctor made me give up marshmallow shoes a few years back. I was on the news that they might make it illegal but that wouldn't help because it looks like an underground network of marshmallow shoe smugglers is on the rise. Kids on the street OD on the stuff sometimes and are birthing Marshmallow shoe infected children.

Those marshmallow shoes sure have come a long way, harmless snack to national epidemic. At least I have my vivid marshmallow shoe stories to tell my grandkids, even they don't believe them all. In the days of old in the days of gold, in the days of marshmallow shoes.
